

OLIVER'S

NEW REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTIONS,

ASTHMAS, AND COUGHS.

---

THE only certain Medicine hitherto discovered for the cure of those dreadful complaints; prepared under the immediate inspection of a regular Physician; and sold, wholesale and retail, at Mr. OLIVER'S Dispensary, No. 27, Soho-square, London, in bottles of 7s. 6d. 14s. and 20s. each, stamp-duty included.

---

“ Medicine is God's second cause of health.”

---

Dr. Cullen, the late celebrated professor of Edinburgh, in one of his lectures, remarked to his pupils, that he did not despair of a remedy being discovered that would cure consumptions. Mr. OLIVER is happy in realizing the prediction of this great physician, by the discovery of his NEW REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTIONS; in offering which to the public, he presumes not to bring it forward as his own invention, but the discovery of a learned physician, who, from the alarming prevalence of consumption of the lungs and asthmas in this fluctuating climate, was induced, at an early period of practice, to direct his attention, exclusively, to the study and removal of those fatal maladies; and, after many years experience, during which this medicine succeeded even beyond his most sanguine expectations, is unwilling, on retiring, that so safe and sure a remedy should be lost to the world. At the request, therefore, of several gentlemen of the faculty, and many respectable patients, who have, by its efficacy, been snatched from an untimely grave, he has consented to make it a public medicine.

The following testimonials, with many others, will prove the sanative powers of OLIVER'S NEW REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTIONS: the originals of the testimonials may be seen at his Dispensary, No 27, Soho-square; where advice may be obtained daily from eleven to two o'clock (Sundays excepted).

---

Copy of a Letter from Mrs. LAWRENCE.

SIR,

About six years since, I was attacked with a disorder, known in this country by the name of influenza; it began with a violent inflammation of the lungs, a dry cough, great pain about my chest and shoulders, and a considerable degree of fever; I was attended by a physician and surgeon, and after three weeks, all the symptoms left me, excepting the cough: in a short time I perceived my cough increasing, and the pain in my chest return; my respiration also became more difficult, and an expectoration of matter, which I raised every morning with much difficulty, alternate fits of shivering and heat; my nights restless, appetite entirely gone, and my flesh wasted to mere skin and bone. In this state I was advised to go into Devonshire, where I resided three months nearly, but found little or no benefit from the change. I tried most of the patent medicines usually sold for consumptions, which however appeared to be of no service to my complaint: I was now advised to take OLIVER'S REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTIONS, which in about four or five days gave me great and unexpected relief; and in the course of five weeks from the time I began to take it, I found myself in most excellent health, which I have ever since enjoyed, excepting the usual interruptions occasioned by slight colds, and which I always get rid of by taking a little of your REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTIONS, as I am never without it, having experienced its benefits in children's complaints, but more particularly in coughs and colds. I shall with great pleasure answer the inquiries of any Lady or Gentleman you may refer to me for farther facts, &c. relative to my case.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

M. LAWRENCE.

Smith Square, St. John's-church, Westminster, July 10, 1808.

---

Extract of a Letter from Dr. Scott of Twickenham

SIR,

YOUR NEW REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTIONS has been administered to two patients, whom I had attended for some time: they were both labouring under phthisis pulmonalis, or consumption of the lungs, and one of them in a very advanced stage of the disease: at the earnest solicitation of the friends of this patient, I consented to a trial of your REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTIONS, after other medicines had proved ineffectual, believing it could neither do good nor hurt, but, to my utter surprise, I saw an evident amendment in the course of a fortnight from the time he began to take it, and in the course of eight weeks, he was restored to a good state of health. The other patient, Mr. Clifford, is much better, being relieved from most of the distressing symptoms attending this malady.

I consider your REMEDY as a great discovery, and I hope that it will meet the success it appears to merit.

The final termination of Mr. Clifford's case above alluded to, you shall be made acquainted with, whether he recovers or not; and in future I shall not object, as has been usual with me heretofore, to patients under my care taking your REMEDY.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,
Twickenham, Middlesex, August 19, 1808. ROBERT SCOTT, M. D.

Copy of a Letter from a Gentleman in the City.

SIR,

In April last, I was excessively ill with a cold, cough, expectoration of viscid matter, great pain in my chest, difficulty of breathing, hectic fever, and spitting of blood. A gentleman, with whom I am acquainted, advised me to try OLIVER'S REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTIONS, which he sent me; and after taking three bottles, I found myself restored to a much better state of health than I had enjoyed for many years, and really consider it as a most valuable remedy for complaints of the lungs.

I have also great pleasure in testifying its efficacy in the complaints to which children are incident, as about the same time I gave it to an infant of mine, who was afflicted with cough and fever, and three or four small doses fully re-established the child's health.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

London, Oct. 6, 1808.

J. G.

P.S. You are at liberty to refer any person to me you may think proper.

Copy of a Letter from GEORGE MATCHAM, Esq.

SIR,

In June 1807, my son, about 18 years of age, was very ill, with every symptom of a rapid and confirmed Consumption, pain in the chest, hectic fever, violent cough and expectoration of matter, with extreme debility and loss of appetite. In this alarming state, by the advice of a gentleman in the neighbourhood, I gave him a few doses of OLIVER'S NEW REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTIONS, which entirely restored him to health in the course of a few days, and he is now in good health, and free from every complaint of the lungs.

I am, sir,

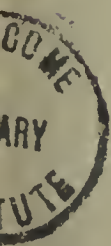

Your most obedient servant,

GEORGE MATCHAM.

Askfold Lodge, near Horsham, Sussex, Oct. 10, 1808.

P.S. Conceiving it to be a sovereign remedy in all complaints of the lungs, I shall always keep it by me, to give to the poor.

G. M.

Copy of a Letter from Mrs. LEVI.

SIR,

I beg to acknowledge, with heartfelt gratitude, the great cure your REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTIONS has performed on me. For many years, I was languishing under that dreadful disorder, a Consumption, and had for a long time been under the care of several eminent gentlemen of the faculty, both physicians and surgeons, from whom, however, I received no benefit. I then made trial of your medicine, the very first bottle of which did me much good, and by a little perseverance in its use, I was restored to an excellent state of health. It is now four years since I first took the REMEDY, and, thanks be to God! I enjoy such perfect health, that I have lately been delivered of a fine healthy boy; but before taking your REMEDY, I uniformly miscarried, which I attribute to my former excessive weakness and debility.

I am, sir,

Your obedient servant,

ELIZABETH LEVI.

Petersham, near Richmond, Surrey, Nov. 10, 1808.

Great benefits have resulted to the afflicted, from the modern mode of practitioners selecting and studying a particular branch of the profession only. In physic, as in other sciences, a more clear, comprehensive, and concise view must be taken of the nature, symptoms, and cure of a disease, when the mind is confined to that object alone. MR. OLIVER directs his attention exclusively to complaints of the lungs; and, in difficult cases, has the advantage of consulting a physician whose studies have been long confined to the cure and removal of pulmonary disorders only.

Patients residing in the country, by stating their cases, and enclosing a two pound note, will have a box containing six bottles, at 7s. 6d. each, of OLIVER'S NEW REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTIONS, &c. purposely prepared, and adapted to the peculiar symptoms of their disorders, sent to them by any conveyance they may point out. Where advice is not required, patients enclosing a twenty shilling note, will have three bottles, at 7s. 6d. each, forwarded to any part of Great Britain, on directing a line as above.

Sold by all reputable Venders of Patent Medicines throughout the United Kingdom.